'PLUS' PACK FOR SAMARA GSX

November 17 1995

Following on from last year's introduction of the Samara Juno saloon comes the announcement of the Samara 1.3GSX Plus Special Edition, which offers the Juno's good looks and interior specification but at a lower price tag of just £6795 ex-works.

The cost cutting has been achieved by basing the conversion on the 1.3 litre four-door saloon rather than the 1.5 litre version. GSX Plus specification comprises a moulded wraparound front bumper and matching rear design, linked to deep sill extensions that visually lower the car. All body components are painted to match the body colour, while a set of Juno alloy wheels and low profile tyres complete the exterior transformation.

Inside, for the first time in any new Lada can be found a CD player fitted as standard equipment, while other creature comforts include a glass tilting sunroof, leather bound steering wheel and deep pile luxury upholstery.

The four-door Samara body shell is a convenient and practical design offering generous family accommodation, good headroom and a useful sized boot compartment that can be further extended by folding flat the rear seat backrest. The 1.3 litre engine offers sprightly performance with a top speed of 92 mph coupled to an overall urban fuel consumption figure of 30.4 mpg.

The GSX Plus is currently available through the Lada network of dealers nationwide and is sold with a full three year mile warranty, six year anti-perforation guarantee and one year's free membership of Green Flag National Breakdown roadside recovery service for additional peace of mind.
